Who would have guessed that in 1999-2002, when a search for Early Masonic Documents took one to what libraries or private collections had available, only to be met with the resources now available on the computer internet? Now many of these documents may be found, transcribed and word-searchable at the click of a mouse. In order to make some attempt to keep more current with the times, this original compilation from 1999-2002 has been updated to reflect in more detail where some of these very interesting documents may be found for those searching for the early beginnings of Freemasonry.

Below has been added the tables of contents of some of the more popular references to early Manuscripts where texts may be found. In the below Table various websites have been added where the text may be viewed., Remembering that these websites may or may not remain available on the internet. Many of them have also been digitally saved in the archives of the Library of the Onondaga & Owego Masonic Districts Historical Societies [OMDHS], and have been annotated as such in the below Table.

For a good historical background on Freemasonry, the reader is referred to:
The Genesis of Freemasonry, by Douglas Knoop and G. P. Jones. 1947, which may be read at http://www.phoenixmasonry.org/genesis_of_freemasonry.htm

At least 35 of these Manuscripts may be read on the OMDHS Website at <http://www.ombhs.syracuseasons.com/content/masonic-philosophy-and-ritual>

Wikipedia has an interesting, brief, article on Masonic Manuscripts at http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Masonic_manuscripts

APOCRYPHAL MANUSCRIPTS [Forgeries or Impostures]

In Volume I, Chapter IX of Robert Freke Gould’s History of Freemasonry he describes six Manuscripts which are considered Apocryphal [or Forgeries] by most learned Masonic scholars. The six Manuscripts noted by Bro. Gould are:

- I. The Leland Manuscript [sometimes called the Locke Manuscript] – ca 1753. For those wishing a further discussion of this Manuscript see <http://www.ondhs.syracuseasons.com/content/masonic-philosophy-and-ritual>
- II. The Steinmetz Catechism – ca 1803; reprinted in the Masonic Magazine for February 1882, this time giving the German and English versions in parallel columns.
- III. The Malcolm Canmore [Coan-More] or Great-Head Charter – 1806
- IV. Krause’s MS, or Price Edwin’s Constitution of 926 – ca 1806
- V. The Charter of Cologne – 1816; copied 1818; This so-called charter appears to have been first printed in the Annales Mafonniques, 1818 and many German versions of and commentaries upon its text have since appeared (Heldmann, 1819; Krause, 18 21; Bobrik, 1840; Eckert, 1852; Kloss and others). It is also accessible to the English reader in many popular works (Dr. J. Burnes, Sketch of the History of the Knights Templar, 1840; Findel, History of Freemasonry, p. 692; Lyon, History of the Lodge of Edinburgh, p. 316; Masonic Alaga !Zine, Jan 1882). It consists of a preamble and thirteen clauses on articles, the latter being lettered in due sequence from A to N.
- VI. The Larmerius Charter, or the Charter of Transmission - It is immaterial whether the French Order of the Temple is a revival of La Petite Resurrection des Templiers - a licentious society established in 1682 - or an offshoot of the Lodge Les Chevaliers de la Croix, 1806. The Charter of Transmission, upon which rest the claims of this body to being the lineal successors of the historic Knights Templar, was not published until between 1804 and 1810 and its earlier history, if, indeed, it has one, is so tainted with impostures, as to remove any possibility of unraveling the tangled web of falsehood in which the whole question is enveloped.
- Bro. Gould’s comments on the above impostures may be read at http://www.phoenixmasonry.org/goulds_history_volume_1.htm, pages 200-220.

The manuscripts of the Old Charges exhibit a basic similarity, but they fall readily into “families,” each of which displays a large measure of textual uniformity. This classification was first worked out by the great Masonic scholar Dr. Wilhelm Begemann in 1888. There are eight families, each indicated by a name and a code letter.
